WARNING: Wine Fraud is on the increase

As wine becomes more of a global product, Bordeaux, in particular. More and more criminals are clicking onto the fact that they can profit from robberies. Wine is relatively easy to fake and fraudsters have been selling wine since time immemorial. The French government has an extensive anti-fraud agency to prevent and often investigate dubious merchandise. The US government could prosecute counterfeit wine under federal fraud laws. The Wall Street Journal reported that the FBI is investigating the sold of counterfeit wines.

The best protection against such fraud is to select your sources with due diligence.

Fine wine distributed by Exceptional Wines has been laid down in the correct storage conditions essential for its optimal maturation, and were directly transported in temperature and humidity controlled r containers in their original cases and its authenticity is always certified.
